of imaging techniques to determine the cause of brain edema may also be important as we attempt to improve therapy. As the relationship between volume and pressure is not linear in the intracranial space, relatively small changes in volume can result in dramatic reductions in pressure. Thus, a reduction in intravascular volume of 10 cc can produce an ICP reduction of approximately 25 mmHg. This volume/pressure relationship compels us to develop new agents that can be used early to reduce cytotoxic edema and then, given the observations with regard to the leakage of gadolinium into the brain after the first 72 hours, to use agents that assist in closing the blood-brain barrier during that time.

These recent findings also suggest that the trend toward raising the cerebral perfusion pressure, calculated as the mean arterial pressure minus the ICP, may be somewhat hazardous. This is certainly fine if attempted after the first several days of injury when the barrier begins to leak. Future studies are necessary to determine the optimal cerebral perfusion pressure, the best mechanism to treat cytotoxic edema, and what tools can be used to reduce blood-brain barrier leakage.
